Grass Roots Horse Focuses In A New Direction

Following a fast paced winter of bringing the up close action of the wild horse round-ups to the public in what can be described as close to real time, Grass Roots Horse will be heading in new direction. We are dedicated to stopping the government's mismanagement of America's wild horses and burros which we view as a path that is leading to their ultimate extinction.

Our adjusted course brings us into more research and investigation which we feel is necessary to keep things moving forward.

Educating the public on the issues and empowering them with the tools necessary to take effective grassroots action remains our top priority. We are continuing those initiatives and will also be delving into new, related areas that have heretofore been unexplored. Grass Roots Horse will bring news of those efforts to our ever-increasing constituency of concerned wild horse advocates in the near future

Grass Roots Horse is proud to have been able to move some important issues into the court system in 2010 and 2011 for the wild horses and burros and we will continue to take bold action wherever appropriate, whether in the courts or in Congress.

Please visit us at our website www.grassrootshorse.com and our blog <http://blog.grassrootshorse.com> and discover our new look which we will be unveiling shortly.
